

WHAT IS THE NSRI?

The National Strategic Research Institute (NSRI) at the University of Nebraska is the only University Affiliated Research Center (UARC) in the country dedicated to delivering solutions for Combating Weapons of Mass Destruction (CWMD) to U.S. Strategic Command (USSTRATCOM) and across other federal agencies. NSRI provides essential engineering, research, and development capabilities across the CWMD missions. As one of 13 DoD established UARC's, NSRI operates in the public interest and in a special strategic long term partnership with our DoD sponsor.

DOING BUSINESS WITH NSRI

The NSRI's UARC status provides an advantageous relationship with DoD agencies.

The NSRI stands prepared to provide the capabilities and expertise to deliver research solutions on the toughest of research challenges. NSRI receives funding from project sponsors through contracts generated from our sole-source, Indefinite Delivery Indefinite Quantity contract with USSTRATCOM, as well as other direct contract vehicles and grants.

The NSRI's UARC status allows for a unique, collaborative relationship with sponsors through our Integrated Team Process (ITP). The ITP creates an open and effective line of communication between the Government and NSRI, reducing the contracting process timeline while increasing responsiveness to our sponsor's evolving requirements.
